

Ohio school students feel effects of gas shortages

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio schoolchildren, bundled up by their mothers for the cold winter weather outside, are wearing extra sweaters in the classrooms these days.

About two-thirds of the state's more than 2.3 million school children are going to classes in buildings where thermostats are set at 68 degrees or below due to the natural gas shortage.

All the metropolitan area school districts, with the exception of Cincinnati and Cleveland, are operating under natural gas curtailment plans to meet cutbacks required by suppliers, said Don J. Frericks, coordinator of the energy conservation program for Ohio schools.

Frericks said nonresidential customers, which includes schools, have had natural gas supplies cut back 10 per cent by West Ohio Gas Co. and 29 per cent by Dayton Power & Light Co.

Columbia Gas of Ohio, Inc., has curtailed gas deliveries to its large volume users by some 40 per cent, he said.

Frericks said Columbia Gas has agreed to work with the state superintendent's office to spread out the cutbacks on individually metered buildings over a total districtwide basis.

Meanwhile, school systems are trying to conserve, by going to alternate fuels if possible, lowering building temperatures, and shutting off heat after school hours, he said.

"The smaller the school system, the more difficult it is to save," Frericks said.

The ADA Exempted Village School System, serving Ada and rural Hardin County, has 1,157 students who attend the elementary-junior high-high school complex, Supt. Ernest Little said.

Even following all recommended conservation methods, Little estimated the school system has cut natural gas use by 30 to 35 per cent, some 5 per cent less than required.

After April 1, excess gas users will have to pay a penalty fee, but Little said he refuses to set back any further the thermostats in the lower school.

Frericks said he thought most schools "can continue to maintain schedules in a relatively normal manner and conserve the amount of gas utility companies are asking us to conserve."

However, some schools, such as those in Columbus' suburban Bexley, are considering calendar adjustments to save fuel.

Supt. John Blough said Bexley schools were considering seven-day school weeks in February and late March to allow for a 20-day shutdown between periods as a fuel-saving "disaster plan" if other methods of meeting the required gas cutbacks fail.

And yet, Frericks is optimistic that Ohio's schools can cope with the natural gas shortage.

"As we see it now we're learning to live with the curtailments and cutbacks and we don't see any reason for closing schools," he said. "Together we can make it," Frericks said.

He added that "education must lead in setting a conservation ethic."

Demos forming economic plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — As confrontations between President Ford and the Democratic leaders of Congress move closer, the long-promised Democratic economic program is beginning to take legislative form.

President Ford has challenged congressional Democrats to match their criticism of the administration's economic initiatives with specific programs of their own.

In response, House Speaker Carl Albert last week called in committee chairmen and asked for pledges that economic and energy legislation would be reported out by specified dates.

Among the first to respond was the Banking Committee, which drew the assignment of shaping legislation to nudge interest rates downward. It is now near the end of hearings on bills to force banks to extend loans for low-and middle-income housing and certain other purposes.

The panel has set a target for a House vote before the end of February on the bill, which is strongly opposed by the Treasury Department and the Federal Reserve Board.

The committee also has scheduled subcommittee hearings to begin Thursday on various proposals to aid the depressed housing industry. Among the proposals are ones to inject federal money into the mortgage market and to lower interest rates.

The committee has a goal of reporting to the House by early March some form of legislation to make it easier for a prospective home-buyer to obtain a mortgage.

Some Democratic-directed committee activity has been reaction to Ford proposals rather than affirmative movement along alternate lines.

Demos forming economic plan

WASHINGTON (AP) —

As confrontations between President Ford and the Democratic leaders of Congress move closer, the long-promised Democratic economic program is beginning to take legislative form.

Chairman Al Ullman, D-Ore., contends passage of this bill is a necessary prelude to any Democratic legislation to reduce demand for imported petroleum. If the presidential plan for control by price raising gets well under way, it will preempt the field, Ullman said.

Ways and Means also is finishing its version of a tax-cut bill designed, like Ford's, to stimulate buying and thereby the economy. However, the developing Democratic version is directed more toward the lower end of the income scale.

Ullman's proposal would include no tax rebate for individuals with over $30,000 income. Ford's plan would allow a rebate of up to $1,000 for a family with $41,000 income and over.

At the lower end of the income scale, Ford's program would give a taxpayer at the $5,000 level a refund of $12. Ullman would give a taxpayer at the $5,000 level a total tax break of about $260.

The committee expects to report its tax-cut bill to the House by the end of February, then move into energy taxation.

Appropriations subcommittees are working their way through lists of proposed cutbacks and postponements submitted by Ford. The consensus is that nothing like the $17 billion in reductions he advocated will be approved — an outcome that would swell the prospective deficit beyond the nearly $52 billion forecast by Ford.

Ford eyes economic recovery

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford says the economy will improve faster than some experts predict and that it will be in good enough shape to justify his seeking election in 1976 for a full four-year term.

Before returning to Washington from a 26-hour visit to Atlanta to promote his economic-energy program Ford said Tuesday that he believes the economy "will do better by the end of this year than the experts think."

Ford was expected to continue plugging for his programs in a breakfast meeting today with 100 Democratic members of Congress, including chairmen of 13 major committees.

He voiced his optimism at an Atlanta news conference shortly after the White House sent a gloomy economic message to Congress predicting higher unemployment, permanently higher energy prices and a less bountiful standard of living for Americans.

Asked if the economic forecast might change his mind about running, Ford said he believes there "will be an improving picture" although it will not be "as good as we would like it."

"I think the economic circumstances will be good enough to justify at least my seeking re-election," the President said.

Ford said his $349 billion record peacetime budget, submitted to Congress Monday with a $52 billion deficit, was carefully written to avoid "the rekindling of double digit inflation." He said, however, it was not "an austerity budget."

The President also declared he would "vigorously oppose any attempt" by Congress "to slash without rhyme or reason" his $92.8 billion defense budget because it could jeopardize national security.

He based his optimism about economic recovery partly on the determination of business to sell its goods and "some evidence" that public confidence is improving. He characterized cash rebate programs being used by auto and appliance industries to stimulate sales as a "good, hard marketing practice."

Ford said his predictions about improved conditions later this year probably would be translated into a 5 per cent increase in the Gross National Product, the total output of the nation's goods and services. "It will undoubtedly mean an increase of about two million in those employed," he said.

The best way to turn the economy away from a recession would be action from Congress, "the quicker the better," Ford said.

Onassis said doing better

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The condition of Aristotle Onassis improved slightly today and his life is not in danger, his secretary and his brother-in-law reported.

The secretary said the 69-year-old shipping magnate's private jet was ready to fly him abroad for treatment "although the doctors do not feel that is needed yet."

The doctors said Onassis has been suffering for some time from myasthenia gravis, a progressive debility or weakening of the muscles, and that the condition has been complicated by an attack of influenza and high fever.

His wife, Jacqueline, was at his bedside, and a heart specialist was flown from New York to attend him. The Greek national radio said he had been in bed at his villa in Glyfada, a seaside suburb of Athens, since last Friday.

Friends in New York said Onassis telephoned his 45-year-old wife, the former Jacqueline Kennedy, on Sunday and complained of being lonely and depressed. They said she flew to Athens on Monday, telling friends she would be back in New York on Friday.

persons continue to conserve, the company added.

All natural gas that can be obtained by the Dayton Power and Light Co. will continue to be made available to consumers. The company has a distribution system with a capacity to meet all natural gas demands. The curtailments have been forced on the Dayton Power and Light Co. by cutbacks from its suppliers.

The company will continue to closely monitor the availability of natural gas for its consumers and make adjustments accordingly.

Trio bound over to grand jury

Preliminary hearings waived by three burglary suspects

The remaining three defendants arrested following the Jan. 30 burglary of the Revco Discount Drug Center in Washington Square Shopping Center waived preliminary hearings Tuesday and were bound over to the Fayette County grand jury by acting Municipal Court Judge Otis R. Hess Jr.

John H. Rossmann, assistant county prosecuting attorney, represented the state at the hearings in Municipal Court Tuesday while Walter H. Seifried served as defense counsel for all three defendants.

Those bound over to the grand jury were Richard W. Stern, 25, of 706 W. Market St., Danny L. Lininger, 22, of 1451 Meadow Drive, and Stanley East Jr., 22, of 706 W. Market St.

Lininger was charged by Washington C.H. police officers and deputies from the Fayette County Sheriff's Department in connection with burglaries of the drug store, the Fenton-Oliver Sales and Service store, Ohio 38-N, and the Greenline Equipment Co., U.S. 22-E.

THE SPECIFIC charges lodged against Lininger included three counts of breaking and entering, possession of stolen property from the Wright Lumber Co., Williamsport, and Fenton-

Oliver Sales and Service, theft of narcotics, possession of narcotics and possession of a hyperdermic needle and syringe, possession of amphetamines and possession of an hallucinogen.

Bond on Lininger was continued at $50,000 while he is being held in the Fayette County jail.

Stern is presently free on $5,000 bond from charges of permitting prohibited use of a dwelling for the purpose of keeping narcotic drugs, possession of stolen property from the drug store and the Wright Lumber Co. and possession of an hallucinogen.

East was charged with possession of an hallucinogen for sale and is being held under $10,000 bond in the county jail.

A fourth defendant, who was also charged with the alleged burglaries of the drug store and Fenton-Oliver Sales and Service, Russell W. Hidy, 23, of 706 W. Market St., was bound over to the grand jury Friday.

Denise Graham, 24, of 706 W. Market St., who was arrested following a raid of the Market Street residence, was to appear for arraignment on a charge of possession of an hallucinogen Wednesday in Washington C.H. Municipal Court.

'Trying to outguess the crystal ball'

Health board prepares 1975 budget

Fayette County Health Commissioner Dr. William E. Covert said the county health board Tuesday was just "trying to outguess the crystal ball" in determining a workable budget for 1976 that is to be prepared and submitted to the Ohio Department of Health's budget commission by April 1.

Dr. Covert said the county budget is expected to carry an eight to 10 per cent increase over the 1975 budget due to increased workload.

"The Fayette County Health Department received $2,700 in state funds for 1974, the same funding since 1930," he said. "About 60 per cent of the workload in the county health department is under state-mandated requirements," Dr. Covert added, "however, it is not state funded so that means the local departments furnish the personnel and expenses to carry out state programs, which is in sharp contrast to the schools and other public services."

IN OTHER business conducted during the regular monthly meeting Tuesday, the board discussed the current tuberculosis program in Fayette County and the newly-organized county program for the early periodic screening diagnosis and treatment of children.

According to Dr. Covert, the Fayette County Health Department conducts an "acceptable" tuberculosis program as required in compliance with standards set by the Ohio Department of Health, including one year medication for active cases.

Dr. Covert said Fayette County is "running just a little over the state rate on active cases" of tuberculosis. He said the state health department reimburses the county for treatment of newly-diagnosed active cases of tuberculosis while the expense of conducting a survey program locally is paid through the tuberculosis levy by the county health department and Fayette County Board of Commissioners.

Dr. Covert said the annual contract between the county commissioners and health department is currently up for renewal and he expects the commissioners will vote favorably toward the renewed contract.

He also reported the county health department is looking forward to a successful program in the county for children up to 21 years old with the implementation of the early periodic screening diagnosis and treatment program under Mrs. Michael Vrettos, a registered nurse.

Mrs. Vrettos recently completed a pediatrics associate course in Cincinnati and is now working in the field of pediatrics with a local physician preceptor (or supervisor).

The board reviewed a five-lot subdivision request by realtor Robert Lewis through Helms and Associates, located on Flakes Ford Road, but rejected the application after it was determined to not meet state drainage requirements.

County sanitarians Charles Funk and Frank Lentz were authorized to attend a one-week workshop, conducted by Ohio State University and the Ohio Health Department in March to study changes and new methods of procedure in food and milk sanitation.

The board also anticipated concurring with revisions in sanitary landfill regulations set by the Ohio Environmental Protection Agency, which Dr. Covert said were "practically identical" to those regulations already existing in Fayette County.

Slasher confession proves false

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "It was just drunken shenanigans," says a 44-year-old hotel handyman of his false claim that he was the "Skid Row Slasher."

But the statement landed Theodore Lane, a maintenance man at Hollywood's Brevort Hotel, in jail for a time on Tuesday, booked for investigation of murder in the slayings of nine men found with their throats slit.

Lane was arrested after a drunken argument with a friend at the hotel in which he declared, "I am the slasher." The friend called police. Officers arrested Lane, but released him after police determined he had nothing to do with the case, a spokesman said.

Hours after Lane was released, officers took into custody another man who apparently wanted to confess. But it again turned out to be a false alarm. Police said he had "surrendered" himself at a local television station with a razor in his hand.

Police Cmdr. Pete Hagan said the slasher leaves a trademark — in addition to the slit throats — that only he and police know about. But investigators won't reveal the "trademark," so they can positively identify the murderer when they catch him or he confesses.

In another development, police classified as a hoax a tape recording from a man who identified himself as the slasher and threatened to make a reporter his 10th victim. Hagan said the man had been unable to give details of the murders known only by the killer and police.

Most of the slasher's victims were found in the skid row area, not far from police headquarters. A special police task force is conducting the manhunt.

Rhodes meets Demos on school aid bill

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Gov. James A. Rhodes planned to confer with majority Democrats from the legislature today, possibly to disclose his intentions on a newly-approved school money bill.

But aides of the Republican chief executive indicated other legislative matters probably will be discussed.

Key witness testifies

Prosecution rests in burglary trial

The prosecution rested its case shortly before noon Wednesday in Common Pleas Court in the burglary trial of Paul R. Spence, 36, of Columbus. He is charged with several theft-related offenses stemming from burglaries at the Washington C.H. Elks Lodge, 222 N. Main St., and Associated Plumbers Co., CCC Highway-W, Sept. 13 and 14.

County prosecutors James A. Kiger and John H. Rossmann concluded their case after calling two witness Wednesday morning. Their key witness, Paul Hurles, 629 E. Paint St., completed several hours of testimony Tuesday afternoon.

Following the closing of the state's case, Daniel Conner, of Columbus, attorney for the defendant, moved for a directed verdict of acquittal which was denied by Judge Evelyn W. Coffman.

Hurles testified that he kept the police informed of the activities in which he and Spence were involved in the night of the burglaries.

He gave a detailed account of how he and Spence had entered the Associated Plumbers office and how Spence had opened the safe within. He said that the four of them later drove to the Elk's Lodge where he entered the building and admitted Spence who was preparing to open the safe there when police officers converged to make the arrests.

If HURLES testimony is accurate, it would undoubtedly justify the state's charges of burglary, grand theft, and safecracking.

Conner's goal apparently is to demonstrate to the jury that Hurles testimony is not believable. He questioned Hurles extensively concerning his own criminal record, his use of narcotic drugs and what he had to gain by providing the police with information and testifying in the case.

Under cross-examination, Hurles admitted that he has approximately eight conviction for burglary and has spent some 20 of the last 30 years in prison for various charges. He further stated that he had for a time been a heavy user of methadone and had received his supply of the drug by burglarizing drug stores.

Hurles added that he had a drunken driving charge pending against him at the time of the burglary. A conviction on that charge would have cost him his job as a school bus driver for the Miami Trace School District, he said.

He admitted that he had supplied the police with information in order to have his DWI charge lowered to reckless operation by Washington C.H. Police Sgt. Luther Anderson.

He was indicted by a Fayette County grand jury for the burglary. He was granted immunity from prosecution to testify at Spence's trial.

In his motion for directed acquittal, Conner posed the theory that Hurles himself had committed the offenses with which Spence was charged. That he had implicated the others to obtain the reduction of charge on the DWI, and that he was claiming the others had committed the offense to save himself.

Conner noted that agents from the Bureau of Criminal Identification and Investigation, London, who assisted in the investigation of the burglaries, had not found Spence's fingerprints on the tools used to crack the safe or enter the buildings. He also noted that officers who surrounded the Elks lodge testified that they never saw Spence enter the building.

Although Judge Coffman denied the motion for directed acquittal, Conner is expected to present the same arguments to the jury. The case is likely to be presented to the jury Wednesday afternoon.

Some 10,000 persons are alive today who would have been killed last year if motorists hadn't slowed down, the council said Tuesday.

10,000 auto workers set capital rally

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly 10,000 auto workers, most of them unemployed, are rallying here to tell the government they have a better idea than President Ford's for getting their industry and others back to work.

Stung by the layoffs of nearly 300,000 members, leaders of the United Auto Workers union are busing in workers from as far away as Michigan and flying in others from Texas and California for today's rally.

The UAW will offer its own antirecession program calling for big tax cuts for low and middle-income workers and a massive public service jobs program, among other things.

"We must have immediate responses to the people's needs from the incoming Congress and the administration," UAW President Leonard Woodcock said in calling the rally.

"There is vast human suffering and frightening insecurity behind the cold statistics of massive, still rising layoffs," he declared.

The auto workers were to hear from a host of congressional leaders, mostly Democrats, who were invited to the rally at the Washington Armory. Ford administration officials also were invited but a UAW spokesman said it was uncertain if any would attend.

Woodcock has said if the protest fails to produce "positive action out of the government" he would be back in the spring to march in the streets with 200,000 to 250,000 workers from his union and others.

The rally is the latest sign of unrest in the ranks of organized labor over the nation's ailing economy. Two weeks ago the AFL-CIO called its general board into emergency session here to publicize the plight of the unemployed and offer its plan for turning the economy around.

Leaders of the electrical, tobacco and textile unions also have called for mass demonstrations.

In a speech Tuesday to the National Press Club, Woodcock called Ford's new budget with its forecast of 8 percent unemployment for the next two years a prescription for "planned recession."

He said the President's plan for dealing with the energy problem by raising taxes and prices to reduce consumption would add to the economic problems and "bring us to a disastrous social situation."

Woodcock endorsed the action by the House Ways and Means Committee in approving a first $8.4 billion installment on a tax cut.

The union chief also called for an expanded public jobs program, federal standards for unemployment compensation, a national health insurance program which would provide protection for the unemployed and energy conservation programs.

Meeker, president of Hobart Corp., an Ohio-based firm that ranks among the major food equipment firms in the world, was recently elected to head the NAM. Its membership comprises 13,000 businesses and represents 80 percent of the country's production.

All three men agreed inflation was the No. 1 problem.

Meeker blamed excessive government spending—not, as some of his questioners suggested, profit-hungry businessmen.

"People look upon the business system as a big machine. They think no one can stop it and no one can control it," he said.

"The system is predicated on profit," he emphasized. He said it was necessary to mechanize to maximize profits, improve efficiency and survive in the highly-competitive realm of industry.

and could include one or more of Rhodes' new statewide programs.

Rhodes called a news conference for this afternoon to discuss one such program. While it was kept under wraps, there were reports it would involve development of cities' downtown areas.

With one senator from each party bolting ranks, the Senate added its approved 21-12 Tuesday to a House bill that distributes an additional $91.3 million to Ohio's 613 school districts in four installments starting in March.

Majority Democrats, as they had in the House, voted down a Republican amendment-request by Rhodes—which would have earmarked the funds for salaries instead of providing them across-the-board to be spent as the districts want.

Rhodes actually proposed the allocation of $108.7 million from an anticipated surplus of $122 million at the end of the state's two-year bookkeeping period June 30. He would have given teachers a $650 bonus June 30, and provided another $300 to $375 for school employees.

Since the Democratic proposal would permit the districts to use the funds for salaries if they wanted, Democrats said they saw the Rhodes proposal as an attempt to fulfill a campaign promise to give teachers a $1,000 raise and other school employees a boost of about $500.

Senate Republicans argued that the Democratic plan would boost per pupil state support by $40 and "as a practical matter" obligate the state to continue the higher payments in the next fiscal biennium. The governor's proposal, with regard to salaries, would do the same thing, Democrats countered.

Republican leaders of both houses have called on Rhodes to veto the bill. The latest was Senate Minority Leader Michael J. Maloney, R-7 Cincinnati, who urged that action "regardless of whether it (the veto) stands" and "in the best interest of public education in Ohio."

Sen. Oakley C. Collins, R-17 Ironton, bolted party ranks to support the bill, while Sen. Donald J. Pease, D-13 Oberlin, voted against it. Pease wanted to withhold the appropriation for inclusion in a new school foundation formula expected to be approved this spring, he said.

Rhodes, who has 10 days to act on the measure after he receives the official copy from the legislature, has to consider a possible mathematical disadvantage that could have him suffer a major setback in the first month of his new term.

Democrats, with a 21-12 margin in the Senate, could override easily in that chamber. They would need to keep in line only one of five GOP defectors who supported the bill in the House. They would need three-fifths majorities — 20 in the Senate and 60 in the House.

One ranking Democrat said privately "he's not going to veto this so early in the new ball game, especially when we were so close to agreement anyway, and he's got to look ahead. He's going to be asking Democrats to do a lot of other things."

Otherwise, both houses conducted routine committee sessions as they prepared to take a mid-winter vacation vacation, beginning later this week and ending Feb. 18. The main purpose is to permit legislative researchers to prepare analyses of most of the 348 bills now pending.

The House received 25 new proposals Tuesday, bringing its total to 259. Four new Senate bills boosted the total in that chamber to 89.

Among them were new versions of no-fault auto insurance and collective bargaining procedures for public employees, along with a bill reforming Ohio's probate court procedures.

Among the House bills was one that would require Ohio's more than 180 boards and commissions to submit their rules and regulations for legislative review, as well as mailing copies of them to public libraries throughout the state for citizen scrutiny.

Americans willing to beat inflation?

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — The United States can recover from the throes of inflation but the public "will have to pay some painful prices to do it," Meeker said.

That's the grim outlook from a high official of one of the world's largest companies.

"The question is: do we really want to stop it?" said O.B. Butler, vice-chairman of Procter & Gamble Co. "From what I can see, I don't know if we're ready to."

He made the remarks Tuesday during a panel discussion at Xavier University. He was accompanied by industrial leaders David B. Meeker, chairman of the National Association of Manufacturers, and Philip O. Geier Jr., chairman of Cincinnati Milacron, Inc.

Meeker, president of Hobart Corp., an Ohio-based firm that ranks among the major food equipment firms in the world, was recently elected to head the NAM. Its membership comprises 13,000 businesses and represents 80 percent of the country's production.

Leaders of the electrical, tobacco and textile unions also have called for mass demonstrations.

In a speech Tuesday to the National Press Club, Woodcock called Ford's new budget with its forecast of 8 percent unemployment for the next two years a prescription for "planned recession."

He said the President's plan for dealing with the energy problem by raising taxes and prices to reduce consumption would add to the economic problems and "bring us to a disastrous social situation."

He blamed failure to raise taxes during the Vietnam War as a key factor.

"This country thought it could have both guns and butter," Geier said.

Evidence question

Henry S. Ruth Jr., who succeeded Leon Jaworski as Watergate special prosecutor, has testified against proposed legislation which would require him to release so-called "raw evidence" about supposed wrongdoing by Richard M. Nixon while he was president. The bill would empower Ruth's office to include in the special prosecutor's final report "the full and complete story of Watergate and other investigations" carried out by that office.

Considered strictly in light of the doctrine that all citizens are entitled to the rights of due process, Ruth's position is tenable. Before Congress rejects the proposal, however, it should give due weight to a unique circumstance in the case of the former president.

This circumstance is that following his resignation in disgrace Nixon received an absolute pardon relieving him of all legal responsibility for his acts while in the White House. The question is whether in accepting the pardon Nixon also waived his right to have evidence withheld unless allegations are to be tested in a court of law.

The question should not be shunted aside by Congress. It is one which demands careful thought and thorough discussion.

A WORD EDGEWISE . . . . By John P. Roche

Double-moral bookkeeping

There are times when I really wonder at the human capacity for autohypnosis. If in 1970 the student body at Boston University had invited a pro-Hanoi speaker and a dean had chastised the choice, the whole place would have gone up in smoke. The American Civil Liberties Union would have issued a press release condemning this repressive act and, in the Times, Anthony Lewis would have had one of his bouts of hysterics. For my part, I would have taken a dim view of the speaker's position, but defended the right of the students to invite anyone they damn please. Indeed, I was recently asked how I felt about an invitation by a nearby university to a spokesman for the Palestine Liberation Organization. There was some feeling that his talk might constitute a "provocation." My reply was that I consider the P.L.O. to be a bunch of ideological gangsters, but that if its speaker appeared (unarmed) he deserved to be heard. And anybody who tried to break up the meeting or shout him down should be tucked in the slammer.

Recently, however, Ronald Ziegler has been put through the mill at Boston University's School of Public Communication. Originally the student assembly unanimously voted to invite him to lecture on the "Use and Abuse of Power" at a $2,700 fee. The Dean then intervened, protesting the fee. In fairness, he did add that he would defend Ziegler's right to speak — for nothing. The faculty unanimously supported this suggestion and, when the matter returned to the student government, the latter disinvited Ziegler. The nub of the attack was that by paying Ziegler, the school was endorsing the whole "immoral" Watergate sequence. (Presumably paying a pro-Hanoi speaker in 1970 did not involve any endorsement of the North Vietnamese dictatorship — to have done that would have been to engage in guilt by association.)

What is raised by this assault on Ziegler is the whole question of double-moral bookkeeping. Let me say, for starters, that I think the student assembly was out of its mind to invite Ziegler to talk at a School of Public Communication. It is comparable to inviting a color-blind individual to lecture on the French Impressionists. Ziegler's specialty was non-communication. Second, the $2,700 fee is mind-boggling. (By the way, if Ziegler has a good agent, I suspect he will get his money whether he speaks or not: high moralism does not void the law of contract.) In short, I believe the original offer was insane.

However, once the invitation was out, it seems to me that the Dean and his faculty behaved in a quite outrageous fashion.

One can make a case — a number of conservatives do — that the faculty and administration of a school should act ideologically in loco parentis to the students, effectively straightening the children out when the little dears go astray. But the liberal view, as I understand it, is that the students are not to be treated as non-compos infants, that they have wide areas of free choice, and that customarily in a liberal institution one of these areas is who they want to listen to on issues of the day.

Between 1968 and 71 it was hard to turn around without finding some left-wing militant whooping up the campus revolution. In my personal judgment a number of them were taking "immoral" positions and collecting substantial sums in the process. One of the prize kooks, who was incapable of uttering an English sentence without fibe "you knows" tucked into it, was picking up $2,000 a shot. (I once did a computation and figured he got $10 for each "you know" and $5 for each "like man, it . . .") If anyone asked me what thought of the performance, I was delighted to unload. But — and this is the vital point — I could never in conscience demand prior censorship on moral or any other grounds (short of the likelihood he might shoot up the audience).

To this, a conservative (like, I presume, the Dean of Boston University's School of Public Communications) will replay, "Why don't you take your morals seriously?" I do, but I also have a haunting sense of fallibility and deep suspicion of obsequious piety. One of the students at the school, commenting on the decision, said, "We have a chance to tell the entire country that we don't want a deceitful person to speak from a public platform. No one in America had a say in the pardon of Nixon, but this is our opportunity not to pardon Ziegler." I suppose it's uplifting to have students with such a prophetic afflatus, but this sinner's reaction is simply to gag.

The goof appears on the special form to be filed by persons who do not pay local option taxes but work in counties which have the tax. The form shows the tax rate as "one-half of one per cent, or .0025." Officials say it should read "one-fourth of one per cent or .0025."

Assistant Deputy Revenue Commissioner Glenna Payne said the error would affect about 10,000 returns and those who miss the inconsistency and pay a higher tax will receive a refund automatically.

Last year 900,000 individual tax forms were ruined when the total tax due blank was blacked out accidentally.

Lake Bonneville, a now-extinct lake of the United States, once covered what now is Nevada, Utah, Oregon and California.

'Bedsheet' ballot attacked by Brown

By ROBERT E. MILLER
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio voters may be asked in June primary elections to approve constitutional changes doing away with so-called "bedsheet" ballots and clarifying a requirement for the rotation of candidates' names on ballots.

Secretary of State Ted W. Brown, although a Republican, said he has been assured by Democratic leaders in the legislature that they "will cooperate and consider the adoption of the proposed amendments."

Brown said he has been urging since 1972 changing the law regarding presidential primaries in which voters have faced long lists of delegates and alternates pledged individually to various presidential candidates.

Instead, Brown would have the candidates' names on the ballots, with voters choosing blocks of delegates by casting a ballot for the presidential candidate of their choice.

Brown said he would like to see action taken on his proposal this year.

"The closer we get to the 1976 presidential election, the more difficult it will be to reach an agreement on language with the various political factions," he said.

Brown noted that in the 1972 presidential primary, Democratic voters had approximately 310 delegates and alternates from which to choose. Some voters had to vote part way on a machine, then finish by marking paper ballots. Tabulating the ballots was "horrendous," he said.

The veteran secretary of state said that while he favors rotating the names of candidates on ballots, a recent Ohio Supreme Court decision convinced him the actual practice of rotating names from ballot to ballot is too restrictive.

He said the law should provide that names be rotated from precinct to precinct — with name of one candidate appearing at the top in one precinct and his opponent's in the next.

Although there are no statewide elections scheduled this year as of now, Brown said most areas of the state will be holding primaries for local issues and candidates June 3.

The legislature almost always makes statewide elections mandatory in off-years such as this by proposing various constitutional changes to voters, Brown noted.

Dear Abby:

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Mom should keep bugs out of ears

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of a very nice, but extremely shy 17-year-old son. He has never had a date in his life, and I'm sure it's because he's afraid he'll get turned down.

He is an A-B student, but doesn't do very well in sports, which could be the reason he isn't very popular with the "in" crowd at school.

He is slightly overweight, but there are fatter boys who seem to hit it off with girls, so that can't be the reason.

It breaks my heart to see him alone all the time.

A girl's club is having a dance, and the girls ask the boys. One of my best friends has a daughter in this club. Should I put a bug in my friend's ear and ask her to ask her daughter to ask my son? He wouldn't have to know I arranged it.

SORRY FOR SONNY

DEAR SORRY: Don't put any bugs in anybody's ear. Your son may be a late bloomer. And another one of his problems could be a well-meaning mother who's inclined to run interference for him. Let him develop socially at his own pace.

DEAR ABBY: I read with interest the letter from the girl who lied. I wondered if sometime in her life she was forced to lie. Let me tell you my story:

When I was very young, I found that if I told the truth when my mother questioned me about a mischievous act, I would get a spanking, so naturally, to escape the spanking, I lied. She was a strict disciplinarian (she meant well, but her method was all wrong), so in order to get along with her I lied until I was 28 years old, when I married and had my own home.

When mother visited me for the first time, she asked me a question, and knowing that the truth would displease her, I lied. I felt like a child, and right then and there I made a vow that I would never lie to her again. Also I made a vow that I would never live with anyone I had to lie to in order to get along with. I'm 48 now, and I've kept both vows.

I know that some of my answers don't please the questioner, but I always tell the truth. I've often wondered who will account for the lying I did for the first 28 years of my life.

BEEN THERE

DEAR BEEN: There is only one reason people lie. It's because they haven't the courage to tell the truth. More emphasis should be placed on truthfulness, and less on punishment.

DEAR ABBY: I was very angry after reading your reply to the woman who refused to use birth control because it goes against the teachings of the Catholic faith. There is no reason why people should question anyone having a large family. The number of children a couple should have should be left up to the individual couple. As this woman pointed out, she is asking no one's assistance in the upbringing of her children.

In my opinion, many people are limiting the size of their families not only because of their concern for the world, but because if Mom has too many children then she may not be able to work for some time, which may mean not having the last car model, and the children won't be able to go to camp, and Mom won't be able to have new furniture for the house.

If people are happy living like this so be it. However, if they want a large family with a lot more responsibilities, which in their opinion means a lot more fulfillment, then it's their business.

MT pupils in exchange program

By SANDY MCCOY

Several Miami Trace High School students are participating in a short term exchange program within the United States.

Among these are Denise Drake, Bent Hanson, the MTHS foreign exchange student, Marcia Markel, Sandy McCoy, Jolene Rapp, Nancy Rapp, Carol Rex, Vernon Stanforth, and Jomi Warner who will be going to Mamaroneck, New York, for one week, from Feb. 21-28. The students will be traveling by bus from Columbus to New York City, where they will be met by their AFS families.

Our students will be attending Ryneek High School, which is situated on the coast, and living with families from that area. Later on this year ten students from Ryneek will be coming to Miami Trace for a week, staying with local families and attending Miami Trace.

The program was designed for students to have a better idea of differences in student life within the United States in a different part of the country.

Employment procedures eyed

By JANE ANNE KIGER

Mr. Guy M. Foster, superintendent of the Miami Trace School District, answered many questions of Future Teachers Association members at their recent meeting.

He told members the general procedure for employing teachers in Fayette County. The interview is considered the most important factor, while college records and recommendations are also considered. Also the college which the prospective teacher attended is reviewed.

Mr. Foster encouraged students who had a desire to attend college to do so. Many types of loans and scholarships are available.

Other business of the meeting which President Diane Conley discussed was the recent sale of placemats. It was decided to keep those remaining for next year and to urge sales at schools.

Mrs. Theresa Craig, the advisor, explained several teaching projects. Members may ride buses to the elementary schools and tutor children after school. They may also go to Eber during study halls. Mrs. Harold Gass, of Title I, also needs help in making crafts for students enrolled in her reading program. Students interested in any of these projects signed up after the meeting.

Tougher emissions ruled eyed

in CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP)—A U.S. Environmental Protection Agency official has indicated that tough auto emission tests imposed on Cincinnati motorists may be extended to nearby counties in Indiana and Kentucky.

Francis T. Mayo, Chicago regional EPA administrator, said in a letter to city officials Tuesday that a study committee would be convened as soon as possible to make recommendations.

Mayo's letter was in response to a complaint by Cincinnati City Councilman Thomas Brush. Brush said it was unfair to impose the tests on Cincinnati and Hamilton County motorists while Kentucky and Indiana motorists used the same air space and roads without the tests.

Brush also said it was doubtful that Cincinnati could comply with 1976 clean air standards if the other two states were not included.

Complaints also were filed with the EPA by Sen. Robert Taft Jr., R-Ohio, and Reps. Donald Clancy and Willis D. Gradison Jr., both Ohio Republicans.

Brush said the study committee would include EPA, state and local officials. The EPA, however, will make the decision, he added.

Mayo wrote that it now appears the standards cannot be met unless motorists in adjoining states are subject to the same compulsory testing of their cars as Hamilton County residents.

All Hamilton County motorists were ordered, under penalty of $50 fines, to have their cars tested at Cincinnati or suburban Norwood testing lanes starting Jan. 1.

MT cagerettes travel to OSU

The Miami Trace High School girls' varsity basketball team traveled to Columbus on Jan. 31 to see the Ohio State University girls play a touring Australian team.

Approximately 16 people made the trip, including adult advisors Mr. and Mrs. Bill Sowash. After the game the group toured the campus and ate their evening meal in the university area. Everyone enjoyed the trip and felt it was very worthwhile watching two such fine teams play.

Officials probe Fort Wayne fires

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — Authorities hunted more clues for arson today in fires that damaged several downtown buildings Monday and Tuesday nights.

A fire caused heavy damage in the upper halves of a five-story and a six-story building Tuesday night. Investigators said the buildings would have to be torn down.

The structures housed drapery, antique and import shops on the ground level but were vacant on upper floors.

Fire officials said the blaze was discovered about 30 minutes after arson investigators had left one building after discovering evidence of arson in a fire that caused lesser damage Monday night.

Across the street from the buildings, the 88-year-old Rose Marie Hotel was destroyed by fire Monday night. And 12 blocks away a fire erupted in the Third Presbyterian Church.

License plates to be updated

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — State license plates for 1976 will be updated for three years with stickers in an effort to save taxpayers money, state Highway Safety Director Donald D. Cook said.

The director said the decision to reuse the red and white plates was based on the costs of steel, plate manufacturing by outside contractors and an appraisal of Ohio's present plate production system in the state Department of Rehabilitation and Correction.

Current plates on vehicles purchased in 1974 will be extended for use through this year with the purchase of a sticker, a highway safety spokesman said.

Honor inmate walks away

CHILLICOTHE, Ohio (AP) — An honor inmate at the Chillicothe Correctional Institute apparently walked away from the dairy barn Tuesday, officials reported.

William Brumley, 33, sentenced to 1-5 years for breaking and entering in Pickaway County last April, went on honor status in October, authorities said.

Indian militants face charges

SHAWANO, Wis. (AP) — Charges that could bring prison terms of more than 90 years have been filed against five of the Indian militants who surrendered after a 34-day siege at a religious order's estate.

Twenty-eight others were charged with criminal trespass to a dwelling and disorderly conduct when they appeared for arraignment Tuesday. Nine persons under 18 were to be handed over to juvenile authorities.

All 33 of the adults pleaded innocent.

The Indians, members of the Menominee Warrior Society, seized the former Alexian Brothers novitiate in nearby Gresham on Jan. 1. They surrendered Monday.

Under a pact with the Chicago-based order, the former Roman Catholic abey is to be deeded to the 2,300-member Menominee tribe as a health and school facility.

Mike Sturdevant, 30, of Neopit, chief spokesman for the demonstrators, was charged with armed robbery, armed burglary and false imprisonment.

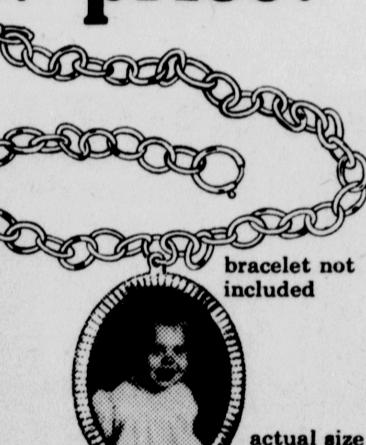

The same charges were also filed against John D. Perote, 28, Neopit; Robert C. Chevalier, 24, Neopit; John J. Waubanascum Jr., 26, Green Bay; and Doreen K. Dixon, 18, Neopit.

Perote and Waubanascum were also accused of endangering safety by conduct regardless of life.

The five were accused in a sheriff's complaint of stealing cash, rifles and clothing from a caretaker, his family and some friends who were evicted from the man's home on the estate when the takeover began.

WHEAT CROP BEING EATEN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Above normal temperatures prompted new winter wheat growth in southern areas of the Great Plains last week, but much of it was quickly eaten by grazing livestock, the Agriculture Department says.

"Farmers in Texas and Oklahoma were busy moving cattle off the overgrazed and muddy wheat fields," the department said Tuesday in a weekly summary of weather conditions.

The report, reviewing the situation as of Feb. 2, said wheat conditions in Kansas ranged from "very good in the south central and east" to poor in some areas of the west and north where dry topsoil raised chances of wind erosion.

Elsewhere in the plains, the condition of winter wheat was highly variable, including critical shortages of moisture.

Legislature to correct 'goofs'

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Two "goofs" by last year's legislature were on their way to being corrected today by the current session of the General Assembly.

One gives a better break to kids, the other to old folks.

The Senate Transportation and Labor Committee Tuesday recommended passage of a bill that removes from Ohio law an accidental 1974 ban on riding kiddies' tricycles on sidewalks.

The error came about when a Senate Committee, considering a uniform traffic code, inadvertently included tricycles in the definition of bicycles and thus banned them from sidewalks.

The pending bill, by Sen. Douglas Applegate, D-30 Steubenville, and others, simply excludes tricycles from the affected definition. The original bill, effective Jan. 1, has not been enforced, he noted.

Otherwise, the Senate Commerce and Labor Committee began hearings on a bill enacted last year under which the elderly and other employers of casual household help had to dig deeper into their pockets to buy Workmen's Compensation insurance for their help.

The 1974 law increasing Workmen's Compensation benefits underwent extensive revisions, but retained section required coverage for anyone who pays out as much as $50 in wages during a three-month period.

The pending bill, which has bipartisan support, raises the ceiling to $250 during three months, or $1,000 a year.

Sponsoring Sen. Jerome P. Stano, D-24 Parma, said the new law still would have the effect of requiring coverage for full-time domestics such as maids.

Sen. Theodore M. Gray, R-3 Columbus, a co-sponsor, echoed reports by members of both houses that the 1974 law "stirred up a bigger storm of protests at the grass roots than anything we did last year."

In other action, the Senate Commerce and Labor Committee named a subcommittee to study several bills that would repeal the public employee strike-banning Ferguson Act and establish collective bargaining procedures.

Several bills on the same subject are headed into a subcommittee in the House. Hearings on all the bills are expected to be held simultaneously.

Sen. Anthony J. Celebrezze, D-25 Cleveland, has been named chairman of the Senate subcommittee. Its other members are Sens. Thomas E. Carney, D-32 Girard, and M. Ben Gaeth, R-1 Defiance.

Agents continue Patty Hearst hunt

HILLSBOROUGH, Calif. (AP) — On the first anniversary of the kidnaping of Patricia Hearst, FBI agent Charles Bates said special agents continue fulltime pursuit of the fugitive newspaper heiress.

"Every day brings us closer to finding them," Bates said Tuesday, referring also to William and Emily Harris. "I just can't tell you exactly when. We're not standing by waiting for things to happen."

Bates said there is no reason to believe that Miss Hearst, 20, has left the country. He said it is likely that someone "willingly ... or unwillingly" has helped the fugitives or they would have been captured by now.

Randolph A. Hearst, Patricia's father, said simply of the family's year of torment, "There is no anniversary in our minds."

He and his wife, Catherine, passed the first anniversary of their daughter's kidnaping Tuesday without special recognition.

A year ago, Miss Hearst was a University of California art history major preparing for marriage. Now she faces a possible life prison term if convicted of the bank robbery, federal firearms and more than a dozen other charges pending against her.

Hearst was attending the Hearst Foundation's national youth conference in Washington just one year after Patty Hearst was dragged from her Berkeley apartment by "soldiers" of a tiny terrorist group, the Symbionese Liberation Army.

Mrs. Hearst spent the anniversary of the abduction quietly. She left the family mansion at one point in a chauffeur-driven car and returned later in the day.

Money Matters

By Gary Dunn

Some Plain Talk About Borrowing & Lending Money...

People borrow money because then want to BUY, or DO, something.

People lend money in order to make money. The rate of interest charged on loans depends on how certain the lender is that he'll get his money back.

Some people are such poor risks, either through circumstances or reputation, that they can only borrow from illegal "loan sharks" and must pay an astronomical interest.

Others are forced to deal with pawnbrokers, putting up "collateral" and paying interest that can reach 42 per cent a year.

Personal loan companies, themselves borrowing money in order to loan it, are expensive sources of loans, having to make a profit over and above the interest rates they pay. Rates can reach an equivalent of 40 per cent a year.

Revolving charge accounts operate on a general maximum of 1½ per cent a month, or 18 per cent a year.

The lower the rate of loan interest, the better must be the credit risk.

Best wishes to Mr. & Mrs. Roy Jacobs on their approaching Golden Wedding Anniversary.

Congratulations to Conchemco on their record-shattering sales year in 1974. Keep up the good work men.

Congratulations to Lester Jordan on receiving Ohio's 1974 "Pork Industry Excellence Award".

Best wishes to Mr. Elmo Wilson upon his retirement. We join the community in saying "thank you for your 44 years of dedicated service to our schools and to our children".

Courts

ALIMONY SOUGHT

Dorothy Walls, 317 Clyburn Ave., has filed suit in Common Pleas Court seeking separation and alimony from Noah Walls. The parties were married Oct. 5, 1937 in Brookville, Ky., and have one emancipated child, according to the petition. Neglect of duty is stated as grounds for the action.

CIVIL SUITS

The Fayette County Bank, Jeffersonville, has filed suit in Common Pleas Court seeking judgment in the amount of $16,603 from Harold Stewart, 717 Western Ave. The plaintiff claims the money is now due on a note executed Dec. 21, 1974.

Ohio Farmers Insurance Co., Westfield Center, has filed suit in Common Pleas Court against Ronald D. and Carmelia East, 528 Gibbs Ave. The plaintiff claims that it has paid to William and Marjorie Harris some $3,000 for damages incurred as a result of an accident in Washington C.H. during Feb. 1973 involving Ronald East. As the Harris' insurance company, the plaintiff is seeking to recover its loss from the defendants. According to the petition, Carmelia East signed East's application for an operator's license and is therefore liable for his financial obligations.

SALE ORDER SOUGHT

Elizabeth L. Sprenger, Akron; Wilhelmina H. Haniewich, Eleanor J. Page, and Helen C. Hall, Columbus, have filed suit in Common Pleas Court seeking the sale of property in which they claim a clear one-half interest. Named as defendants are Harry L. Hadley, Moorestown, N.J., who has a one-half interest in the land as a life estate, and 18 of his relatives. The suit requests that the four parcels of land in Perry Township be sold at private sale and the proceeds be divided.

Bombers collide

PLATTSBURGH, N.Y. (AP) — The cause of Monday's midair collision of two Strategic Air Command jet bombers over rural Vermont may never be revealed, U.S. Air Force officials said.

The investigation into the crash in which four fliers escaped unhurt "may take six months before it reaches the secretary of the Air Force, and he decides to release it or not. It's not up to us," said Maj. Claude J. Bradshaw. The Air Force secretary could seal the report forever, he said.

The four Air Force officers ejected from the jet bombers moments before the collision. The men were rescued safely early Tuesday from a Vermont mountain after sitting in sub zero weather for two hours.

The officers were identified as Capt. Larry D. McMaster of Chester, Iowa, pilot of one of the FB11s; Capt. Donald G. Vann of Evansville, Ind., a navigator; Capt. John E. Hockenberger, of Zelienople, Pa., a pilot and 1st Lt. James D. Kotton of Cleveland, Ohio.

Bayh and Lugar spent $2.5 million

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Sen. Birch Bayh and his Republican challenger, Mayor Richard Lugar of Indianapolis, spent more than $2.5 million in their Senate race last year.

Final reports filed with the Indiana secretary of state show it was the most expensive campaign for any two candidates for the same office in Indiana since record-keeping began.

Bayh, who won a third term, spent about two-thirds of Lugar's total. The senator's total, however, does not include thousands of dollars spent independently in his behalf by the United Auto Workers and other unions.

American party candidate Don L. Lee reported spending a little over $16,000.

What is your category?

By DAVID MUSTINE

It is amazing how people in our society are categorized. They can be either smart or dumb, happy or sad, virtuous or immoral, fair or dishonest, rich or poor, benevolent or tight, pretty or ugly, humble or obnoxious, truthful or hypocritical, religious or atheist, democratic or dogmatic, American or Communist, conservative or liberal, pragmatic or idealistic, conformist or rebellious, friend or enemy.

Once such a label has been glued upon a person's reputation his future actions will not change the category that he is in. You see, our society is limited to prejudice views that overpower our minds and prevent us from being fair and objective. This social characteristic allows one opinion or impression to condemn and ruin a person's life. It allows every person to be conveniently filed into one category, thus permitting an individual to realize ahead of time what he is destined to be in our methodical society.

Play preparation begins

By ANDY MERRITT

How long has it been since you had an evening on the town? Furthermore, how long has it been since you've gone to a play? Your chance for both is coming! Although it is still sometime off, rehearsal for the Washington Senior High School's musical; "Bye, Bye, Birdie," has begun! The cast, under the direction of Victor Pontious, is full of undiscovered stars and standouts from last year's play; "The Mouse That Roared!"

It takes a lot more than just a talented cast to produce a play. There are many people behind it you don't see. These people are members of the production committees. They work just as hard toward making a play a success as the actors themselves. We would like to give these people the recognition they deserve. Therefore, the Blue Lines will feature one of the production committees whenever possible until the week of the play.

Popping windows on sale for fraction of 1st cost

HINCHINBROOK, Mass. (AP) — Want to buy some "huge, rather unusual, reputedly famous, reflectorized windows, originally designed for an office building?"

The windows used to adorn the John Hancock Tower in Boston — until hundreds of them started popping out of the new skyscraper.

Now the survivors are up for sale at a local discount house.

"We can't tell you where this glass comes from, but the Declaration of Independence can," says the advertisement in an oblique reference to John Hancock's famous signature.

The windows started falling out of the 60-story building two years ago and were replaced by black, wooden panels, giving the insurance company's new home office the popular nickname, "Plywood Palace."

Now the plywood is being replaced by glass again, and the Building 19 Sales Co., a discount house in this suburb south of Boston, has launched a novel advertising campaign to sell the old 12-by-5 foot, 500-pound windows.

Architects, aerodynamics engineers and builders pondered, and continue to ponder, what made the windows pop out of the tower.

And that helps Building 19 in its advertisements.

"We've been told that this very fine quality glass has been very carefully, scientifically, painstakingly designed and tested ... and retested ... by a huge battery of some of the world's most prominent engineers and architects.

"We cannot guarantee this glass in any way. We offer it 'as is, where is,' but if it should fall out (perish the thought), all we can promise is that we'll sell you replacement plywood very cheap."

Fighter sets climb marks

GRAND FORKS, N.D. (AP) — Air Force officials said Tuesday the F-15 Eagle tactical fighter unofficially broke eight world records in the last month for time to climb.

They said the aircraft broke five records set by a U.S. Navy Phantom jet in 1962 and three set at higher altitudes in 1973 by the Soviet Foxbat. The F-14 climbed to 30,000 meters, the highest altitude tested, in 3 minutes, 27.6 seconds. The previous record was 4:03.5. It reached the lowest altitude, 3,000 meters, in 27.6 seconds.

The test flights were conducted at Grand Forks Air Force Base.

Claims for the records must be verified by the Federation Aeronautique Internationale in Paris, Air Force officials said.

"I have suffered a coronary attack from which I am recovering very satisfactorily," he said.

Man purchases Washington paper

MENTOR, Ohio (AP) — A Mentor man who attends flea markets for fun may have picked up George Washington's personal copy of his commission as general and commander-in-chief of the Continental Army.

Richard Ahlstrom paid $12.50 for a framed, 18th Century style print at an antique sale held by the Lake County Historical Society in 1969.

"The document stated what it was and to whom it was presented, but just like trying to give away dollar bills on street corners, it seems no one believed it," Ahlstrom said with a grin.

The document outlines Washington's instructions from the Continental Congress to establish military discipline and a fighting force.

The edges are tattered and it was folded in several places, so Ahlstrom and others believe Washington may have carried the paper throughout the war to prove his congressional authority.

The original of the commission, dated June 19, 1775, is in the National Archives. Historians at George Washington University identified the copy as the work of Charles Thomson, secretary to the Continental Congress.

The Library of Congress and a Philadelphia expert on 18th Century manuscripts helped identify the handwriting and ink as consistent with the period.

The document was bought at a sale at Lawnfield, home of President James Garfield in Mentor. It had been donated by Mrs. Peter Hitchcock, a board member of the Lake County Historical Society.

She said she found it in the attic of her mother's home in Milton, Mass., more than 10 years ago. It had been passed down from her grandfather, a doctor in Hartford, Conn., whose ancestors were said to have been friends of Washington's.

The family did not believe the document was genuine, Mrs. Hitchcock said.

Ahlstrom said the commission is for sale but he has not received any offers. He said it should go to the Mount Vernon Association for its collection of Washington historical items at the general's home in Alexandria.

Laurel Oaks schedules open house on Sunday

WILMINGTON — Some of the nation's most unusual high school programs will be open to the public from 1 until 4 p.m. Sunday at the Laurel Oaks Career development campus, Wilmington.

Director Exley Wical said the open house is being held in connection with National Vocational Educational Week, Feb. 9-16. It will also give prospective students and their parents an opportunity to see the programs of their choice, and others.

Laurel Oaks is located on the site of the former Clinton County Air Force Base, just east of Wilmington. Much of the land, buildings and equipment which were on the base have been converted to educational use and are playing a key role in the operation of the vocational-technical facility. The lands around the former base ammunition dumps have become picnic grounds and campgrounds, operated by the school's natural resources program. The deep-freeze has been converted into a colorful, quality meat processing plant. From a glass-enclosed area, the public can see an animal enter on the hoof and proceed to sides of beef, hanging in a cooling area. Connected to the meat processing area is a butcher shop which retails quality meat.

THE FORMER non-commissioned officers club has become a student center, complete with ping-pong tables, pool tables and a dance floor. The senior food service students operate a fine restaurant in the center which is called the Oak Club. The former bachelor officers quarters is now a hotel-motel, operated by the students. It's the only motel on a high school campus in the country. A nose dock, which once housed huge C-119 "flying box cars" while engines were being repaired, has become the laboratory for the nation's only mobile home program.

The open land at the former military installation has been pressed into service as grazing land for the more than a hundred head of stock. Much of the grounds are farmed, yielding crops of corn, wheat and soybeans. There's a welding program that has one of its graduates making $29 per hour working on the Alaska pipeline system. There are also top-notch programs in masonry, carpentry and business operations of all descriptions.

"The job market may be tough, but our graduates have saleable skills," Wical said. "They're highly trained."

A recent addition to the Laurel Oaks facility is the general-technical college which will serve a five-county area. One campus of the Ohio Southern State College will use the facilities of the former air base, while the other campus will be situated in Brown County. Dr. Lewis C. Miller, college president, said the Ohio Southern State College would offer some general liberal arts, technical career-oriented courses, and adult post high school education.

Wical said the public is welcome to tour the campus and see the programs in operation. "It's one of the real values in public education," he said.

Rhodes plans construction

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — While not confirming reports that he will propose a transportation bond issue, Gov. James A. Rhodes has left no doubt that he plans major new highway projects.

Rhodes told the Ohio Turnpike Commission on Tuesday his goal is to make Ohio "the transportation center of America."

The governor announced last Friday he will ask voter approval in June of a bond issue to fund a renovation program for downtown districts in major Ohio cities. A Rhodes aide said Thursday a bond issue to raise revenue for transportation programs was also under discussion but had not been agreed upon.

Rhodes did not detail his highway plans to the Turnpike Commission during his brief visit, nor did he specify sources of revenue.

But he did say that, "We have to have the best highway system in the nation. In the end, it will be highways and jobs."

He vowed to "finish all of the interstate" highway system during his four year term. The system currently is more than 90 per cent complete.

Earlier, turnpike commission Chairman James W. Shocknessy said he was "entirely satisfied" that Rhodes had not sanctioned a recommendation to raise gasoline taxes by two cents and apply the four per cent sales tax to gasoline purchases.

CANCER CRUSADE LEADERS — Tom Mark, left, chairman of the American Cancer Society's 1975 educational and fund-raising crusade in Fayette County, is pictured with Tommy Casanova, star defensive back of the Cincinnati Bengals who is serving as the Hamilton County cancer crusade chairman. Under Mark's leadership, approximately 600 volunteers will canvass residential areas and businesses in Fayette County in April distributing this year's crusade leaflet. "Our local volunteers are part of an army of 2.3 million American Cancer Society volunteers mobilized for the 1975 crusade. This is probably one of the greatest volunteer forces in history," Mark added. "We want to take cancer out of the medical books and put it into the history books as something that afflicted people along time ago."

At Rotary Club meeting

Fairfield boys school operation is outlined

The operation of the Fairfield School for Boys in Lancaster was explained to members of the Washington C.H. Rotary Club at the regular weekly luncheon meeting Tuesday in the Country Club.

Ralph Starkey, superintendent of the boys school since 1972, explained to Rotary Club members that the school presently has 950 boys, which is 350 above normal since the facility is programmed for only 600 students.

STARKEY, a native of Circleville who was a star tackle on the University of West Virginia's Sugar Bowl team in 1954, said most of the 950 boys range in age from 16 to 17 years old. One-third of the school's population comes from Cuyahoga County.

The school is situated on a campus-type of arrangement and even though all of the boys are juvenile delinquents, Starkey said there are surprisingly few runaway. The school has a 14-member security force, but all the personnel are unarmed.

Starkey said the school has an extensive sports program. With the exception of football, the boys participate in basketball, swimming, track and wrestling on an interscholastic basis. The school superintendent said he has found that most of the boys have not participated in athletic programs in their high schools and he said the school boasts some fine athletes.

The length of time a boy is required to stay at the school has been set by law, according to Starkey. The minimum period is five months and all programs are geared on a five-month basis. "Long term incarceration is not the answer to rehabilitation," Starkey said.

"We're always stressing the success idea and trying to do something to give the kids a pat on the back," Starkey said in explaining the point system used at the school.

Boys at the school are graded on their behavior and actions from morning to night, Starkey said. He added that the point procedure is similar to a reward system because once a youth receives enough points he moves into another zone. There are four zones and on each level there are more privileges.

example, Starkey said, once a youth reaches the third zone he is permitted a one-week furlough from the school to visit his family. A boy can receive a total of 12 points in one day and the maximum total for one week is 84.

A boy can receive a total of 12 points in one day and the maximum total for one week is 84 points.

"Four things are expected from boys at the school," Starkey pointed out. "They are respect for authority, being able to get along with people, doing a good job and being neat and clean."

In closing, Starkey said, "We're dealing with the symptoms only. The causes are back where the youngster came from."

Farming research programs funded

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department research programs would get modest increased allowances in the new budget proposed by President Ford this week, including boosts for animal and crop projects.

Research financed by the USDA would total $473.4 million in the new fiscal year beginning July 1, up $38.9 million or 8.9 per cent from the current 1974-75 spending level, according to the new budget.

Most of the increase would be for programs in two agencies, Agricultural Research Service and Cooperative State Research Service. They would have a combined increase over this fiscal year of $33.3 million.

Department budget experts say increases proposed for ARS include:

—$5 million for improving animal protein production efficiency of beef cattle, sheep, swine, poultry and dairy cattle, including improvements in reproduction and feeding methods, disease control and in plant sources for feed.

—$1.4 million to conduct a nationwide survey of human food consumption and club president Paul Crosby and the program was arranged by Rollo M. Marchant, Fayette County Juvenile-Probate Court judge.

NEW YORK (AP) — Reports of Middle East fighting and tension are so frequent they seem the rule, not the exception. But if you'd like the hopeful side of this long, sad story, watch "Arabs and Israelis" tonight.

The show is the first installment in an eight-part public TV series primarily consisting of interviews with Arab and Israeli families and individuals directly affected by Middle East conflicts of the past 26 years.

The series, produced at a cost of $500,000 by station WGBH in Boston, represents progress of a kind just in its filming.

Its Israeli reports were produced by Zvi Dor-Ner, an Israeli television documentarian. The Arab reports were produced by Mohammed Salmawy, a Cairo newspaperman aided by Peter Cook, a WGBH producer.

According to WGBH, Dor-Ner and Salmawy, after filming their respective segments, met on the neutral turf of Geneva, Switzerland, to collaborate in putting together the segments for "Arabs and Israelis."

As Peter S. McGhee, executive producer of the series, points out at the start of the show, the series seeks out "the softer voices" of the Middle East, not the headline-grabbing cries of extremists.

Tonight's half-hour program bears from two middle-class families whose sons — an Israeli tank commander and an Egyptian Mig-21 fighter pilot — were killed in the Yom Kippur war of October 1973.

Most of the talk is of peace and co-existence, the speakers' thoughts put into sharp focus as they recall the deaths of the two men in a war only a few of those interviewed seemed to say was justified.

And those few speak in vague, general terms. The mother of the pilot says her son fought "for his land, to return our land, to be free."

The dead tanker's uncle, standing near the cemetery in which the soldier is buried, says, "Now that we have these graves, how will we ever leave this place?"

Owens no longer in records

NEW YORK (AP) — "Sure, I'm a little sad — it's like losing a member of the family," Jesse Owens said upon learning that after 40 years the last of his track and field marks has been erased from the record book.

"I looked upon them as a part of history," the Olympic immortal added by telephone from his home in Phoenix, Ariz. "I was proud to be involved in that history-making process but I have nothing but great admiration for the kids coming along today."

"They are terrific athletic specimens, great competitors, all of them."

The absence of the name of Jesse Owens from the list of the world's superlative running and jumping performances was noted by Stan Saplins, New York director of the Amateur Athletic Union, in assembling the 1975 record book.

"It's the first time since 1935 that Jesse's name has been missing," he said. "One can't help feeling a pang of regret. Yet, knowing Jesse, he's not shedding any tears. He's just pulling for more and greater records."

The last of Owens' world records — he once held 11 — was an obscure one, the 60-meter dash. Cliff Outlin of Birmingham, Ala., broke it in last winter's Soviet-U.S. dual meet in Russia, running the sprint in 6.4 seconds. Owens ran it in 6.6 in Madison Square Garden in 1935.

Owens is now a successful industrial consultant, living in Phoenix, Ariz., and a force in the U.S. Olympic movement. Sixty-one years old, balding, he has maintained his athletic physique and at 180 pounds is only 17 pounds heavier than the man who awed the galleries in the 1936 Berlin Olympics.

Before these Games, Jesse figured in the greatest individual performance in the history of track and field. On May 25, 1935, running for Ohio State in a dual meet against Michigan at Ann Arbor, the sleek black athlete set five world records and tied a sixth in the space of 45 minutes.

The sequence of events were the 100 yard dash (9.4), long jump (26-8 1/4), 220 yards and 200 meters (20.3) and 220 low hurdles (22.6).

"I never realized I was breaking world records," Owens recalls. "All I could remember was that my back was killing me. I didn't think I could run 200 yards."

Maryland squad downs hapless Virginia 86-79

By KEN RAPPOPORT

AP Sports Writer

Yes, Virginia, there is a sanity clause.

Maryland's fourth-ranked basketball team doesn't always go crazy and the Cavaliers caught the Terps in one of their more subdued moments Tuesday night. But they didn't beat them.

"It was complacency, I guess," said Maryland's Moe Howard after a tight 86-79 victory over the underprivileged Cavaliers. "I know I wasn't emotionally prepared. I hope the coach recognizes this and jumps on us a little more."

The Terrapins' machine is running in low gear as a result of last Saturday's victory over North Carolina State. The same thing happened after beating the rough Wolfpack earlier this year. Coming down from a psychological high, the Terps had a bad game against Navy and lost to Clemson and North Carolina.

Virginia Coach Terry Holland didn't notice any discernible difference in the Terps, even if they themselves felt depressed.

Noting Maryland's 17-point lead at one time in the first half, Holland said: "We embarrassed ourselves."

In other college basketball games involving ranked teams, No. 6 North Carolina State tripped No. 16 Clemson 92-89 and No. 11 Marquette stopped Wisconsin 69-63.

Maryland sank eight free throws in the last 1 1/2 minutes, four by John Lucas, and shook off underdog Virginia in their Atlantic Coast Conference game. The Terps, 15-3 including 6-2 in the ACC, lost most of a 17-point lead in the first half, then saw Virginia rally from a 74-60 deficit to pull within 78-75 with 2:10 remaining.

Lucas, who led Maryland with 25 points, then missed a one-and-one free throw before the Terps converted four consecutive bonus situations from the foul line for their final eight points. The

Mackey testifies at rules hearing

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Former tight end John Mackey, who earned more than $60,000 a year salary during the height of his career, thinks he wasn't paid enough.

An attorney for the National Football League asked Mackey Tuesday if $61,832 base pay and for preseason and postseason games with the Baltimore Colts "wasn't a large sum of money." "Not if he was the best tight end in the NFL — whatever he received wasn't enough," replied Mackey.

The 33-year-old Los Angeles resident, now an athletes' agent, wound up a tedious two days on the witness stand. He and 15 other present or former players and the NFL Players Association are suing the league over alleged antitrust violations they say keep players in servitude without enough freedom to bargain with other teams.

The Rozelle rule is named after NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle. It gives the commissioner the right to assign players or draft choices when two teams can't agree on compensation for a club that loses a player who plays out the option year on his contract and signs with another one.

Mackey said his salary with the Colts, where he starred for nine years, was puny compared with what some athletes get.

French persisted that Mackey did all right for a former history major at Syracuse University.

Mackey, the NFLPA president in 1970, said Atlanta Falcons owner Rankin Smith once warned in the heat of a contract deadlock that a strike could ruin professional football.

"He told me I was going to kill the goose that laid the golden egg and that the only friends I had in the NFL were in that room and we'd have to iron out," Mackey testified.

Terps made 22 of 25 free throws in the second half.

Brad Davis scored 24 points for Maryland and Howard had 12, giving Maryland's three-guard offense 61 points.

Andy Bonini topped Virginia, 9-8, with 22 points and Wally Walker scored 16 of his 20 while pacing the Cavaliers' second-half rally.

David Thompson gave Clemson a rude welcome to the national rankings, scoring 39 points to lead North Carolina State over the Tigers. But North Carolina State needed all of Thompson's firepower to withstand a furious Clemson rally in the second half.

Marquette, paced by Earl Tatum's 22 points, finished with a flourish to defeat arch-rival Wisconsin for the 10th straight time.

Marcus McCoy and Bruce McCauley led the Badgers with 15 points apiece, followed by Koehler with 14. However, Marquette switched to a zone defense in the second half and held Koehler to three points in the last 20 minutes.

Syracuse's Orangemen continued their surprising season with a 97-89 victory over St. Bonaventure as Rudy Hackert scored 34 points and collected 16 rebounds. The victory improved Syracuse's record to 13-4.

Tourney slated

A men's basketball tournament will be held Feb. 15-16 at Kingman School, near Wilmington.

There will be team trophies for the three highest placing teams, individual trophies for the first place team, and a trophy for the most valuable player.

The entry fee is $50, and the drawing for opponent assignments will be held at Kingman Feb. 12.

Proceeds will go to WDHK softball team, Wilmington, the tournament sponsors. Further information may be obtained from Steve Lerrick, tournament director, at 513-382-4035.

He added Smith warned players "they'd have to accept the contract proposal or they (the owners) would call off the season."

Do barons now control all sports?

By WILL GRIMESLEY

AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — "The integrity of sports is in the hands of the money makers," one well-known sports figure remarked today.

The reference was to tennis ace Jimmy Connors and his refusal to represent the United States in the Davis Cup competition while at the same time playing a $100,000 challenge match against Rod Laver.

When his patriotism was questioned by a bitterly disappointed Dennis Ralston, captain of the U.S. team which lost to Mexico, Connors responded:

"Well, maybe pride in one's self should come before pride in anything else."

Sports have become big business. A $100,000 prize may hang on a single golf putt. A tennis player, such as Connors, can win $100,000 with a match-ending smash. Pitcher Catfish Hunter signs a contract for $3.75 million. Basketball kids sign for a million before they get out of high school.

Professional sports are on a big money binge and the natural spinoff is a new breed of men with black satchels — the agents. Few top-flight pro stars would be caught dead without a manager — or a cordon of financial advisers — at their elbow.

"You can blame the United States' loss to Mexico in the Davis Cup on the agents," said Bill Talbert, a former Davis Cup captain and current chairman of the U.S. Open Championships at Forest Hills. "If it hadn't been for the rivalry between Bill Riordan and Donald Dell, Connors probably would have played on the Davis Cup team."

Riordan is Connors' manager. He and his client are at war with Dell, who manages some of Connors' chief court rivals — Stan Smith, Arthur Ashe and Charles Pasarell among others.

Dell also is counsel for the Association of Tennis Professionals, a union of the top pros. Connors is suing them and the French Tennis Association for $10 million because he was barred last year from the French Open.

Bigs purses and agents' demands have dulled what in the past was a patriotic fervor — in the case of Americans to "win one for Uncle Sam."

"This is not true just in tennis — it is pervading all sports," said Fred Corcoran, director of the International Golf Association and former tour manager for the PGA. "It's one reason I got out of the business. I found little heart left."

Talbert said the Davis Cup format will have to be changed if the event is to survive.

"How are you going to get players to give up their time for 16 to 20 weeks — that's what it takes — when there is so much money to be won on the tour?" he asked. "Besides, agents call the shots."

Hawks blast Cleveland

By BOB GREENE

AP Sports Writer

John Henderson has a thing about the Cleveland Cavaliers.

The 6-foot-3 Atlanta Hawks rookie guard is averaging 12 points a game. But against the Cavaliers, Henderson pumps in 25 points a game.

"I don't know why I do well against Cleveland," Henderson said after leading the Hawks to a 111-97 National Basketball Association victory Tuesday night. He scored 27 points.

"Maybe they bring something out of me," the Hawks' No. 1 draft choice from the University of Hawaii said.

Henderson scored 14 of his points in a third-period surge that saw Atlanta break away from a one-point halftime lead, 49-48, to an 83-71 margin going into the fourth quarter.

The Hawks broke a four-game losing streak, posting only their second victory in their last seven games.

"We've got to win to get in the playoffs," said John Drew, another Atlanta rookie. "Before tonight we figured we have to win 21 of 28 to make it. Tonight was a good night to start."

Drew wound up with 20 points and 17 rebounds.

In other NBA games Tuesday, Philadelphia toppled Buffalo 111-105 in overtime, New York romped past Los Angeles 109-94, Chicago stopped Portland 102-90, Golden State nipped Houston 107-105 and Phoenix edged Washington 90-89.

Warriors 107, Rockets 105

A 38-point performance by Rick Barry was just enough as the Golden State Warriors weathered a Houston rally that just fell short in the game's waning moments.

MT faces state's No. 1 team

By MARK REA

Record-Herald Sports Writer

"What can you say?" asked Miami Trace head coach Dale Creamer about his teams' upcoming game with Circleville, the 1974-75 SCOL cage champs. "After all, they are the number one team in the state with a 15-0 record and we'll just have to play an excellent ballgame."

Creamer takes his Panthers to the Circleville gym this Friday night against the Associated Press' top ranked Class AA team in Ohio. The Tigers have a fifteen game winning streak on the line while Miami Trace has lost its last four games in a row.

The Panther head mentor stated:

"The last time we played them was on our floor and we did not play a good first quarter but came back to play a good second quarter. We were finally beaten by 13 points because of that bad first period."

Creamer said that if there was a key to beating Circleville it would be to shut them off on the inside. He pointed out that, "They like to get the ball in, but in their London game Saturday night they relied on outside shooting."

Trace's lineup will be juggled around somewhat from prior weeks. Starting in the guard positions will be Art Schlichter and Rod Garringer, Gregg Cobb at center, and Allan Conner and Dan Gifford at forward.

Conner and Gifford are the Panther scoring aces. Conner shovels in 12.5 points on the average while Gifford, a sophomore, scores 11.2 points a game. Circleville is expected to stay with their same starting five with Perry Hoskins and Mike McCoy at guard, George Moore at center, and Biff Bumgarner and Harold Reed at forwards.

Four of the Tiger starters average in double figures. Reed leads them all with a 17.8 average. Then comes Moore at 13.8, Hoskins at 11.4, and Bumgarner at 10.8. McCoy owns a 6.6 mean.

Both teams will play a man-to-man defense, with Circleville frequently employing the man-to-man matchup.

Looking back to loss last Friday against Hillsboro, Creamer listed mental errors and inconsistency as the Panthers downfall. He explained that his team played a bad first quarter and got buried and was fighting an uphill battle the rest of the game.

On the game against Bishop Hartley, Creamer stated, "Bishop Hartley was one of the best, if not the best, team we have seen all year. Again it was our inconsistency that cost us the game because we had a terrible first quarter and then made some personnel changes and played super basketball the rest of the game. We just let the game get away from us at the end."

The defensive player of the week is freshman Art Schlichter. In the game Saturday night, he pulled down nine rebounds, garnered four assists, and had four steals. He also collected four points and took two charging fouls.

In conclusion, Creamer said, "It's a privilege to play the number one team in the state and we believe that we will have to play excellent ball to stay in the game."

Mark Roth happy with 'only' 299

CLEVELAND (AP) — Mark Roth had a dream that missed coming true by one pin.

Roth collected his first Professional Bowlers Association tournament championship last week. In the final round he shot a spectacular 299 to clinch the victory.

"I had a dream the night before that I was going to shoot a 300 game," said the 23-year-old Staten Island, N.Y., resident.

"I never dream about bowling and that's what made me feel that it (the perfect game) was going to really happen," he continued. "I was bowling real well through the whole tournament. I shot a 279 and a 280 prior to that."

Roth, who has never recorded a 300-game on the tour, averaged 237 during the King Louie Open in Kansas City and is here this week competing in the $85,000 Cleveland Open at Buckeye Lanes.

Roth recently moved his home from Brooklyn to Staten Island, "because I just needed a change. Brooklyn was getting a little to rough for me." But he still bowls out of a local Brooklyn spot.

The eighth grade team at the Middle School was swamped by Chillicothe Tuesday, 68-24.

Playing on Chillicothe Smith's home court, the local team suffered its eighth consecutive loss. They will again be seeking their first victory when they play Wilmington at home Thursday.

Although the game was close through the first quarter, Smith outscored the Middle School 23-3 in the second stanza to put the game on ice.

County board turns down requests

Fuel reduction, budgetary squeeze nix four school-related programs

By MARK THELLMANN

Due to reduced fuel allocations and budget cutbacks, the Fayette County Board of Education decided against any additional extracurricular programs for the county schools.

The decision, which came during Tuesday night's regular semi-monthly meeting at the county board offices on E. Court Street, affected four requests received by the board concerning:

— the organization of a girls' track team. The budget did not allow for an additional $150 to be paid for a coach;

— a music program held at the high school for all the elementary school children in the county schools. Added transportation costs would be incurred for the program;

— the use of the Bloomingburg Elementary School gymnasium by the PTO for an evening carnival. The Bloomingburg gym, along with Staunton and Jeffersonville elementary schools, have surpassed their gas allocations and are receiving warnings from Dayton Power and Light Co.; and — the use of the Miami Trace High School gymnasium for a professional wrestling tournament to be sponsored by a local organization. Aside from fuel problems, it was mentioned that the last time this program was held, there were problems with smoking and drinking on the premises.

Superintendent Guy Foster brightened the financial picture somewhat when he announced to board members the back tax monies on the annexed county properties would be paid the county school system. It amounted to $6,377.48 and the board stated they would not seek interest on the sum.

IN OTHER matters, the board approved:

— paying the county school's office personnel through the county auditor's office on a bi-weekly basis, instead of the previous monthly practice;

— renewing two-year contracts with banks holding county school system funds, who pledged securities since there is no federal deposit insurance in this situation;

— the employment of substitute custodians Donald Massie, Gary Taylor and Peggy Taylor, effective Feb. 5;

— the employment of substitute elementary teacher, Janet McAllister, effective Wednesday;

— the employment of Glen Marchal, Wallace Hill and Frank Creamer, as driver education instructors at Miami Trace High School;

— and Jeff Lower's attendance at Jeffersonville Elementary School on a tuition basis;

The board approved a textbook study committee for the high school consisting of 16 teachers.

The board moved to officially adopt the revision of the Title I reading project and voted to employ four new teachers. The teachers employed were Elaine Butts, Helen Sauer, LaVerne Dickey, Patty Payton, and Yvonne Foster.

The board approved a policy clarifying the rules and regulations involving access to student records.

Any parent, legal guardian or student 18-years-of-age, can request their record or their son's or daughter's records for inspection.

Leave of absences were granted to bus driver Walter Wingeier, Feb. 10 through March 21; Georgana Stewart, a fourth grade teacher at Wilson Elementary School, Feb. 10 through April 7; and Mary Pinkerton, head cook at Good Hope, Feb. 10-14 (with three of those days non-paid.) Carolyn DeWeese was employed by the board to fill in for Mrs. Stewart during her absence.

The lunchroom budget report was given by supervisor Becky Cordes. She explained to board members there was a present budget deficit of $21,784.71; however, expected $23,682.94 from the government as a subsidy and therefore the program was holding its own.

The board then re-employed Fred Zechman, as head track coach and Harold Cook as his assistant. Board member Wayne Arnold was assigned to serve on the band booster committee. Superintendent Foster and board member Kenneth Payton were named to serve on the bicentennial planning committee at the request of chairman Kenneth Craig.

Board members voiced their support of a committee called "ROOTS" (Return of Our Taxes to Schools), which will lobby in Columbus for increased state funding through taxes.

Board member Marion Waddle proposed the telephone number at Olive Elementary School be changed to a Washington C.H. exchange number since the majority of pupils have Washington C.H. numbers and this would decrease long distance charges. Board members agreed to look into this possibility.

Professional meetings were approved for: Aaron Spaulding, band director, Ohio Music Education Convention in Cincinnati Feb. 6 and 7, registration and mileage paid; and Jeff Evans, assistant principal at Miami Trace, the State Assistant Principal's Meeting in Columbus, registration and mileage paid.

Snow, fog, icy drizzle plague U.S.

By The Associated Press

Snow, freezing drizzle and fog slowed motorists and pedestrians today over much of the nation from the Rockies to the Eastern Seaboard.

Up to 8 inches of snow blanketed the Washington-Baltimore area. Freezing drizzle in the predawn hours added to the woes for travelers there. Winter-storm warnings flew along the Atlantic Coast from South Carolina to New England.

The widespread foul-weather pattern grew out of a combination of storm systems, centered in the Great Basin, in southern Ontario and off the Carolina coast.

Snow ranged out of the Rockies across the northern and central Plains, through the upper Great Lakes region, across the Appalachians and east to the Atlantic. Heaviest amounts were concentrated on the East Coast.

Freezing rain and drizzle glazed highways in scattered areas from the Midwest into the southern Appalachians. Up to an inch of rain soaked sections of the Southeast below the freeze area.

Fog posed a further travel hazard over the eastern half of Texas, in the Midwest and along portions of the southern Atlantic Coast. Snow and freezing drizzle fell through the fog in parts of the Great Lakes region. Visibility dropped near zero in Chicago and suburbs before daybreak.

A growing storm in the West dumped up to 3 inches of snow on Salt Lake City during the night. Travelers were advised of snow throughout the Plateau region.

Temperatures tumbled below zero across the northern Plains. Above-normal mildness lingered over much of the eastern third of the country.

Readings before dawn ranged from 22 at Havre, Mont., to 77 at Key West, Fla.

It was agreed in 1898 that to see the ice come and go on the Yukon River was the one test to be applied for the admission of a chee-chako (newcomer) into the ranks of the sourdoughs.

Widespread fog blanketing the state this morning was expected to lift by mid-afternoon giving way to rain and drizzle. A low pressure and cold front moving eastward is forecast to bring colder air to the state tonight changing the rain to occasional snow with scattered flurries continuing on Thursday.

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Jury selection was to begin today in the case of a Middletown man defending himself against income tax evasion charges by challenging the constitutionality of the federal income tax law.

Roger Whitesel declined an offer by U.S. District Judge Timothy S. Hogan of more time to prepare his case and hire an attorney.

Hogan has warned the defendant he faced a "serious situation."

Whitesel declined the offer saying he had not been able to find a lawyer who could understand the constitutional question.

Earlier Tuesday, Hogan brushed aside Whitesel's contention that he failed to pay his income tax because of a "good faith challenge" to the law.

Whitesel had urged that four counts of failing to file returns and one count of wilfully supplying a false and fraudulent statement of tax liability be dropped because of his challenge of the law.

Shoplift, larceny cases investigated

A Jeffersonville youth was arrested and charged with shoplifting, Washington C.H. police reported today, along with a larceny and a missing person. The Fayette County Sheriff's Department transported a prisoner to Chillicothe and investigated two larcenies.

A 16-year-old Jeffersonville boy was arrested by police and charged with shoplifting for allegedly taking two packages of candy, valued at 44 cents apiece, and a package of yarn, valued at $1.25, from K-Mart, 1650 Columbus Ave., at 7:50 p.m. Tuesday.

Police said the juvenile had hidden the stolen merchandise under his coat and was stopped in the store parking lot. He has been released to his mother.

Four hubcaps, valued at $60, were removed from a car owned by Mrs. John Stewart, sometime during the past two-three days, while the auto was parked in the driveway of her 153 Eastview Drive home, police reported.

Donna Groves, 15, of 1143 Rawlings St., was reported missing by her mother to city police.

The girl, who was last seen at 8 a.m. Monday, is described as being 5 feet 2 inches in height, 115 pounds in weight and having brown eyes and brown hair.

FAYETTE COUNTY Sheriff's deputies Charles Wise and Larry Camp transported Charles R. McLean to the Chillicothe Correctional Institute at 2:30 p.m. Tuesday, the sheriff's department reported today.

A Remington rifle with scope, valued at $200, was removed from a truck owned by Gordon Writsel, of New Holland, sometime between 7 p.m. and 9 p.m. Tuesday, while the truck was parked in the Bowland Lanes parking lot, CCC Highway-W, Sheriff's deputies reported.

Deputies stated the truck had been entered when the wing window was forced so the lock could be reached.

A blue denim shoulder purse, valued at $9, and owned by Patricia E. McConaughey, of Bloomingburg, was stolen from the Washington Square laundromat, between 10 a.m. and 11 a.m. Tuesday.

Sheriff's deputies reported the purse contained $116 in cash, $40 worth of food stamps, a billfold and personal items.

Assortment of charges filed after scuffle with officer

A 25-year-old Washington C.H. man has been arrested by city police and charged with resisting arrest, assaulting a police officer and disorderly conduct, at 2:15 a.m. Wednesday.

Lucky E. Webb, 803 Van Deman St., is presently incarcerated in the city jail in lieu of $2,000 bond. He allegedly refused to leave the premises of the police department when told to do so "or face arrest" after using profanity against Washington C.H. Police Patrolman, Larry Mongold after filing an undisclosed complaint.

When Ptl. Mongold informed Webb he was under arrest, Webb fled on N. Fayette Street.

Apartment complex plan to be aired

Preliminary plans for a large apartment complex will be considered by members of the Washington C.H. City Planning Commission at the regular monthly meeting at 7:30 p.m. tonight in the City Office Building.

City Manager Dan Wolford, who serves as secretary of the city planning commission, said an application for approval of preliminary plans for a proposed apartment development has

Ptl. Mongold caught him and a fight ensued, during which, the leather strap on the officer's uniform was broken. Webb again fled and was caught. This time he punched Ptl. Mongold and tore his lapel and then ran off. Webb fell at the intersection of Fayette and Temple streets and when Ptl. Mongold approached him, Webb kicked him in the groin, according to the report.

Webb was then returned to the police department, but attempted to kick Ptl. Mongold, while being taken to a cell. He was then subdued with mace.

Following the meeting, parents visited their children's rooms and talked with teachers.
